

Global Citizen Evaluation Rubric

	Exemplary (4)	Proficient (3)	Developing (2)	Needs work (1)
Growth Mindset: Curiosity, openness to new experiences, willingness to leave your comfort zone	I demonstrate a curiosity and openness to new ideas, people, places and cultures. I reveal how my research and travels have made me more curious, open-minded, adaptable, and more knowledgeable of my host country.	I reveal how my research and travels have made me more curious, open-minded, adaptable, and more knowledgeable about my host country.	I showcase a willingness to leave my comfort zone and engage with new people, places, or ideas, but do not draw connections between my new experiences in my answer.	I do not reference any new experiences or realizations that helped me come to my conclusion.
Global Perspective & Knowledge Acquisition: Cross-cultural understanding and communication, empathetically engaging with new mindsets and values	My project meets the Proficient criteria. In addition, I showcase an awareness of the interconnectivity between history and modern day, places in my host country and across the world, and my own life.	I discuss differences between cultures and show respect for people whose backgrounds are different than my own.	My research, and reflection are authentic and convincing. However, I do not show much understanding of other cultures.	I do not mention or show any evidence of engaging with cultures other than my own
Personal Development: Self-awareness, showcasing adaptability and flexibility, demonstrating empathy towards self and others	My project meets the Proficient criteria. In addition, I use examples to expose patterns or themes that relate to my question. I discuss how my perspectives or approaches have changed after traveling.	I share original thoughts based on my experience and explore what my topic says about my own life and the prompt.	I speak from a personal perspective, but my reflections are shallow or do not reveal my own thoughts and development.	My project does not include any personal touches or perspective.
Action & Impact: Ability to navigate and make an impact in an ever-evolving world by becoming better collaborators, strengthened leadership and decision-making skills, and understanding the impact you can make in the world	My project meets the Proficient criteria. In addition, I draw logical conclusions based on credible examples. I propose ways I can make a positive impact on others based on what I've learned.	I combine ideas from past personal experiences, observations made, and knowledge acquired during my EF experience, and my own view of the world around me.	I make general connections between my area of exploration and the world, but I do not include my own role in those connections.	I do not make connections between my travels and the world or my own life.
Presentation: Use of clear communication and storytelling skills to clearly explain your conclusions	My project meets the Proficient criteria. In addition, I include different points of view and describe the strengths and limits for each.	My thoughts and conclusions are presented clearly, with clear connections to the prompt, thoughtful evidence, and analysis of that evidence.	I present evidence, but I do not have thorough analysis that explains its connection to the prompt.	It is not clear how my project connects to the prompt, or my conclusion and argument are vague.