LINCOLN MEMORIAL

Building Lincoln Memorial was a big controversy back in the day. Half the country wanted to make a humble log cabin that represented Lincoln's simpler roots, while half the country wanted to build the most impressive monument in Washington, D.C. because Lincoln held our country together during its most difficult time. I always ask the kids, 'Which one would you have wanted? Would you have wanted the log cabin, representing the fact that he was like you and me? Or would you have wanted the temple that exists there today?'

THE FLAG IS STILL THERE

The actual American flag that inspired Francis Scott Key to write "The Star Spangled Banner" is on display at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History. During the War of 1812, Key was on a British ship trying to negotiate the release of some hostages. When he looked out and saw the American flag still flying over Fort McHenry, he was so inspired that he wrote a poem called "The Star Spangled Banner." The rest is national anthem history.

THE PEOPLE'S HOUSE

Since it was first built, the White House has always remained open to the people. These days, of course, not just anybody can walk right through the front door, but in centuries past it was quite a different story. President Jackson used to leave a block of cheese out for people to come by and grab a bite if they were in the neighborhood, and during the Civil War, Abraham Lincoln housed Union soldiers on the ground floor.
