LIVE AT THE APOLLO

The Apollo Theater, built in 1914, is known around the world as a legendary venue for some of history's greatest African American entertainers. Iconic performers like Billie Holiday, Duke Ellington, Ella Fitzgerald, and Aretha Franklin launched or boosted their careers on the Apollo stage. Though the theater fell victim to neglect in the 1970s, a 1986 restoration brought it back into the picture, and an additional overhaul in 2009 has the theater looking better than ever. Today, stars continue to grace the stage at the Apollo—from jazz great Wynton Marsalis to the best new hip hop artists. The theater continues to host its famous amateur nights today, where the dreams of everyday performers are put to the test.

SUGAR HILL

Located in the Hamilton Heights section of Harlem, Sugar Hill was an upscale residential neighborhood whose rowhouses were home to wealthy African Americans during the Harlem Renaissance. The neighborhood got its name because its residents were living the “sweet life,” and influential figures like W.E.B. Du Bois, Count Basie, Malcolm X, Ralph Ellison, and Adam C. Powell Sr. all called Sugar Hill home at one point. In the late 1970s, the pioneering rap group Sugarhill Gang, famous for their 1979 hit “Rapper’s Delight,” named themselves after the historic Harlem neighborhood.

EMPIRE STATE BUILDING

Built in only 410 days, the Empire State Building was the world’s tallest building for 40 years and is still one of New York City’s most popular and recognizable landmarks. Its 1930s art deco spire can be easily spotted from anywhere, but you may not know that the spire was originally supposed to be a docking station for zeppelins!
